ABOUT

Antique albumen print, a view of Cairo street - a mansion Bayt al-Razzaz with its traditional wooden lattice windows called Moucharabin (Mashrabiya). Boys riding donkeys and other figures on the foreground. Titled "Nr 154 Maison Arabe et Moucharabin" on the lower right and signed "Zangaki" on the lower left. Slight signs of wear and fading. Newly framed.

Zangaki Brothers (their names were possibly Constantine and George), were Greek photographers, active primarily between the 1860s and 1890s, they gained recognition for their stunning photographic documentation of Egypt, especially its monuments, landscapes, and local life. They set up studios in Cairo and Port Said, which allowed them to cater to the growing European tourism industry at the time.
