ABOUT

A large Italian dining table by Willy Rizzo, circa 1970, with a rectangular travertine top of subtly bowed outline above a broad faceted pedestal base. Brass edging defines the perimeter of the top and complements the architectural geometry of the pedestal.

Willy Rizzo (1928-2013) was an Italian-born photographer, who began designing furniture after moving to Rome in 1968. He established his own workshops around 1970, producing furniture characterised by strong geometric forms and carefully combined natural and metallic surfaces: materials including travertine, marble, brass, stainless steel, and wood.
